I am trying to find the difference between two dates in a column. I tried this: `TIMESTAMP = `date -d "@$(date -d "1 month ago" +%s)" +%s``; But this gives me always 0 and I have no idea why. A: To get the difference in seconds: `TIMESTAMP = date -d "@$(date -d "1 month ago" +%s)";` Then you can compute seconds by arithmetic or by time: `TIMESTAMP = "$TIMESTAMP seconds"` Increased expression of galectin-3 in lungs of rats with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. Molecular mechanisms underlying the development of emphysema are poorly understood. Galectin-3 (Gal-3), an important mediator of tissue remodelling and a strong promoter of lung fibrosis, may contribute to the pathogenesis of emphysema. We studied Gal-3 expression in lungs of rats with elastase-induced emphysema. We used immunohistochemistry, Western blotting, in situ hybridization, real-time PCR and morphometrical analysis. Rats were treated with 300 units of elastase or control buffer intranasally three times a week for four weeks and analysed. Rats with emphysema showed increased Gal-3 immunoreactivity in epithelial cells of bronchi and lung parenchyma compared to control rats, which was increased further after treatment with elastase. Western blot analysis confirmed the immunohistochemistry. In situ hybridization confirmed

Obama panel endorses final rule on transgender restroom use Republican lawmakers, businesses and conservative activists are challenging a federal agency's decision to allow transgender people to use the bathroom that corresponds to their gender identity in federal facilities. In a draft report released last week, the White House Office of Management and Budget recommended "full implementation" of an Obama administration rule that lifted the ban on transgender people in the military. "To date, the non-discrimination rule has only been used to address intentional bias against transgender people in the administration of funding for federal programs and activities. Full implementation ensures that the rule also applies to non-discrimination based on sex," the office said in the draft, which was released to congressional staffers on March 11. Leaders of conservative groups backed by and/or funded by the Religious Right criticized the OMB's announcement. "Homosexuality, transgenderism and the promotion of alternative lifestyles is incompatible with many religious beliefs," a spokesperson for the Family Research Council told the Washington Free Beacon. "The idea that all Americans should be forced to celebrate diversity and alternative lifestyles by granting these fringe social movements the right to use public restrooms is horrifying to those who believe in the traditional family," the FRC said. "The religious liberties of Christians and individuals of faith across the United States must be protected from government attempts to force them to condone and celebrate a lifestyle that violates the Bible and common decency." The Religious Right also noted that the Obama administration has to date failed to protect business owners' religious liberty in the regulation of businesses, such as Hobby Lobby. "The rights of business owners in private enterprises, particularly family businesses, are also threatened by the social experiment taking place in the Department of Justice," Family Research Council Action President Tony Perkins said. "The DOJ is currently targeting religious families and businesses for their refusal to d4474df7b8
