The RPS Nkosi Chesa Madlala Manteka Ambani Rating Of Impunity On March 28, the African Union commission passed a controversial resolution to take concrete measures to indict each other for crimes against humanity. The AU Commission, the organisation that monitors the continent's political relations, last Thursday adopted the African Commission on Human and People's Rights resolution calling for countries to criminalise any crimes against humanity that are committed between its member states. The resolution is a benchmark moment and a milestone in the continued development of the African Commission on Human and People's Rights (ACHPR), according to the African Union. It is hoped that the resolution will force member countries to move towards holding those who commit crimes against humanity accountable. The AU Commission did not however, reach the AU's determination that most UN member states are guilty of crimes against humanity. However, it did determine that South Africa, Malawi and Zimbabwe are among the countries that are not guilty. South Africa's crimes against humanity The AU Commission said that South Africa holds the distinction of being in a situation where crimes against humanity are committed. The AU Commission is of the opinion that South Africa and Zimbabwe are the only two countries that are currently holding their citizens responsible for crimes against humanity. However, the AU Commission noted that South Africa has the right to set the framework for its domestic institutions and laws that are adopted by the South African government. Still, the Commission said that many government officials, leaders and military officials must be held accountable for committing crimes against humanity in South Africa. It will also help to remove all the clutter and it will identify duplicate files quickly. 32 Bit - Mark your video so it will be ready to be aired on the Internet What exactly makes this remarkable? Why are they doing this? You probably think it should be simple - you just put a digital code/marker on your film which shows viewers you've chosen to make it air-playable. Aren't they just taking the end product (you know your video) and turning it into TVM - TVM meaning: *Television *Mark (stamp) your Production. 1. The Mark costs money on an empty canvas which is the reason you went to post production in the first place. A lot of good videos (say like a decently polished 5 minutes or so) never reach the air because they cost money to make. 2. They are actually pirating your rights - the moral integrity of the artist/director has been compromised. This isn't a valuable help to you in any way. 3. They won't be real bad about it - it would be part of their business model to rip your rights (or not, if they are a cheap outfit) and put it on the air. Look at a lot of the stuff on MTV or the commercials. 4. That is not the point you signed up for when you started post production - it's what the industry did to get into the business in the first place (domestic piracy). No, you shouldn't burn your artwork to the ground if you have put money into it. No, you don't need to shoot it all over again - most of the time your work was created on a budget and there is no way in hell it will be perfect enough. No - you are better off out of that business than still in it. You should be using your new found skills to make new art. Which leads us to... A Simple Marker A Simple Marker requires no post production work (that you can do on your own) or expensive equipment. Just: 1) Get a marker. (This isn't a piece of art, it is a tool) 2) Put it on your artwork (can be traced to make it look more 'official') 3) Edit your artwork to show the marker. You just need to get a marker, find your copy of 'the
