The Feather tool lets you selectively increase or decrease the sharpness of the edges of an image. It's useful for blurring the edges of an image without altering the parts of the image that are important. The Gradient tool lets you draw a gradient, a smooth transition from one color to another. You can create many gradient effects, such as a gradient transition between two different shades of gray. GIF vs. PNG One of the most common questions that Photoshop users have is whether to use.GIF or.PNG. The main difference between a GIF and a PNG is that.GIF is a plain text file format while a.PNG file can store more than just raw data. Both.GIF and.PNG can store transparent image data, which can be useful for compositing images and drawing gradients. However, there are more advanced features in.PNG files that are not available in.GIF files. With a.PNG file you can use a free image editor or the built-in Image Processor tool to convert the file into a.GIF file. That way you can create.GIF files, which are smaller than PNG files, and convert them into PNG files as needed. You can also save your file as a.GIF on the Save As dialog box, located on the File menu. If you would rather create a.GIF file from scratch and not re-save it, you can create a file with Photoshop. If you want to save a file as a.GIF file from the File menu, choose GIF ? GIF Options ? File Options, or on a Mac open the File menu and choose GIF ? GIF Options ? File Options. Then select the Web and Communication radio button, and select the GIF transparency option. [Photoshop Tips via Photoshop
